Amigo Media Soars to the Next Level Postproduction Firm Hires Award-Winning Editor, Opens New Office

Arlington, VA, August 20, 2007 – Amigo Media has flourished in 2007. On the heels of their first authored book and media projects with Animal Planet, National Geographic and PBS, the two-year-old firm added award-winning video editor Luke Lindjhem to the creative mix. Luke is a 2007 CINE Golden Eagle Award winner and an editor for The History Channel series Digging for the Truth.

The postproduction and education company of Washington, D.C.-area media business veterans Jason Osder and Robbie Carman continued their summer surge by moving to new office space at the landmark Henninger Arlington facility in buzz-worthy, conveniently-located Clarendon. Amigo Media's relocation follows the firm's exciting new book deal. The publication of Final Cut Pro Workflows: The Independent Studio Handbook by Apple-Certified trainers Jason Osder and Robbie Carman is slated for a November release (more information at <http://www.finalcutproworkflows.com>).

Additional 2007 highlights for Amigo Media in the field of education and training include:

- Robbie Carman serves as co-author of Final Cut Pro on The Spot (3rd Ed.) with Richard Harrington and Abba Shapiro (Available October 2007)
- Robbie Carman serves as technical editor on Apple Pro Training Series: Encyclopedia of Color Correction / Field Techniques Using Final Cut Pro by Alexis Van Hurkmann
- Jason Osder accepts a full-time faculty position in the School of Media and Public Affairs at The George Washington University
- Robbie Carman receives Xsan for Pro Video instructor certification from Apple Computer

Amigo Media's many positive changes represent the next stage in the company's evolution:

"Two years is a natural point of transition for many small companies," Robbie said about the firm's growth and change. "We are realizing the success of solid plans made at the beginning, and we will continue to evolve."

In its two years, the cutting-edge firm boasts major projects in four key areas:

- Television - Pop Nation, Ms. Adventure, I Want That!, Rock Solid
- Marketing - NicodermCQ website, RTC Relationship Marketing website, My City My Art
- Communications - YouthAIDS fundraising video, IRS bilingual interactive tax training, Jim Beam Annual Video

- Education - Apple Certified Instruction, National Geographic Chasing Monster Storms DVD, PBS TeacherLine website

Amigo Media's publication efforts are yet another demonstration of the entrepreneurial drive and creative instincts that push this talented group forward.

"We see progress both on the day-to-day work and in the future direction of the company," said Jason.

"Amigo Media has the right recipe of energy, focus, and creative insight to succeed over the long term."
